United Press Telegram.
PITTSBURGH, May 20.—State troopers today failed in their effort to arrest the man who outraged and then brutally murdered little 14-year-old Grace Johnson, the Trafford City school girl whose dead body was discovered in the woods late yesterday. Although they searched all night, heading the woods and fields in the vicinity of where the crime was committed, the officers were unable to secure any clue that would lead to the identity of the murderer. The nearest thing to a clue they found was the information that a man wearing a gray suit and gray hat was seen in the neighborhood shortly before the crime was discovered. The officers have no evidence against the man, but they are searching for him to learn what he knows, if anything, of the murder.

TELLS OF "PLANTING" THE DYNAMITE, IN WOOD TRIAL

Witness Testifies Against Head of the Woolen Trust, Accused of Serious Conspiracy.

United Press Telegram.
BOSTON, Mass., May 20.—Dennis J. Collins today took the stand for the prosecution in the trial of President Wood of the American Woolen Company on charges of being responsible for the planting of dynamite at Lawrence during the textile strike, and told how he and John J. Egan "planted" the explosives in the vicinity of the mills.

Collins told the story, making reference to the trial of Egan at which Egan pled guilty and paid the fine of $5,000 imposed by the court.

Attorneys for the prosecution allege that Wood supplied the money with which Egan paid his fine. No other explanation of how he secured the necessary cash seems feasible to them.

The defense scored a partial victory at the opening of the case this morning when they were successful in ruling out references to the Lawrence strike.

Collins told of meeting Egan on the night of the dynamite was placed at various points about Lawrence. He said that he and Egan had been friends for 15 years and when Egan asked him to jump into a sleigh with him and ride about the city, he thought nothing of it.

The witness testified that several times during the ride Egan brought out loud, saying that he was playing a little joke at the request of President Wood of the American Woolen Company.

After considerable debate between the attorneys, the court permitted the admission of testimony showing that Egan had declared that the dynamite was done in accordance with specific orders from Wood.

VOTERS REJECT THE $175,000 BOND ISSUE
BY OVERWHELMING VOTE; HIGH SCHOOL
PROJECT IS BADLY BEATEN AT POLLS

By a Vote of 973 to 138, a Ratio of 7 to 1, Electors Disapprove Proposed Solution of Crowded Condition in the Schools; Result Not a Surprise, Public Sentiment
Being Strongly Against the Proposition.

By an overwhelming majority the voters of Connellsville yesterday rejected the School Board's proposal to issue $175,000 bonds for the erection of a new high school in the place of the present Fourth ward building. Not a single ward placed its stamp of approval upon the proposition, and in not a single one did the few friends of the measure make a serious impression. The ratio was 7 to 1 against issuing the bonds, thereby increasing the tax levy for school purposes from 12 to 17 1/2 mills, or higher.

The total vote in the borough was 1,111. It was a small vote, but it reflected the sentiment of the public of these 1,111 voters, only 138 were for the bond issue, 973 being against it.

Within a few minutes after the polls closed last night the result was known. The ballots were easy to count and every election board completed this duty before going to sleep. The return from each ward only increased the vote against the proposal.

The Fifth ward was more strongly in favor of the bond issue than any other, but the best that could be done there was 38 in favor of it to 113 against it.

The West Side, as was anticipated, voted heavily against the bond issue. In the Sixth ward only 9 voters approved the measure, 144 being against it. The Second ward also voted strongly against it.

The School Board felt that such a building was needed. The matter was put before the people, and their verdict has been recorded. There is nothing for us to do but to adjust ourselves to conditions as they exist.

Superintendent S. P. Ashe said that the first-class room of the new high school, now used as an office for the

Bricks of Presbyterian Church Crash Through Skylight, Endangering Clerk.

With a crash that was heard for blocks, a portion of the old Presbyterian Church came down shortly after 1 o'clock this afternoon, with spectacular effects not anticipated by those engineering the job. The falling walls crashed against the adjoining properties, Huston's Drug Store, and the First National Bank Building.

The skylight over the prescription counter in Huston's was splintered and a rain of bricks and mortar fell to the floor. Earl Wynn, employed in the store, had just stepped from behind the counter when the debris crashed through.

Both Wynn and Edward Erb, who also works in the drug store, had a narrow escape from serious injury. C. Roy Mielzel, the manager, was at dinner when the accident occurred.

Some fear is expressed that the remaining walls of the little grade rooms are likely to fall. All are now down with the exception of the front and that portion of the sides required to support the steeple. No effort was made to dismantle the high points before starting to tear down the walls.

The sidewalk is blocked and complaints are being made by the business men along that side of the street.

FINDS EMPTY BOTTLES

Now Chief Hetzel is Looking for the "Blind Tiger."

When Chief of Police George Hetzel made an examination of the cells in the lockup yesterday afternoon he found 17 whiskey bottles of various sizes stored away in the recesses and dark corners of the little grade rooms. The manner in which they got there is no secret. The bottles were hoisted by strings through the barred windows.

Chief Hetzel discovered this Saturday morning when he arrested a man in the act of attaching a flask of whiskey to a string in the hands of one of the prisoners.

Following the arrest the traffic in liquor among the prisoners did not stop. The cells were cleaned Saturday and from Saturday to Sunday night, the 17 bottles were passed through the bars.

The chief asserts that someone is engaged in a very profitable "blind tiger" business somewhere in the vicinity of the municipal building.

FIERCE FIGHT AT

Two Suspected as "Spotters" are Set Upon by a Crowd.

Special Election Shuts Off the Drinks in Town so Thirsty ones Move Southward for the Day; Policeman Rumour Gets Assistant; Keeps Busy.

Two men were hurt and a dozen arrests made in South Connellsville yesterday as the result of a small riot. The fight occurred when two strangers with a camera were seen in the vicinity of the Atlas Hotel. It was suspected that the strangers were spotters in the employ of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad searching for evidence against employees of the road for violation of the non-drinking rule of the company. The riot followed.

When voices were raised against them, the men made their way from the hotel on Pittsburgh street and turned down Gibson avenue. There they were caught by several party-intoxicated men who followed them, taking them with being spotters. Loud words were followed by blows and within a brief interval the strangers were battling against five attackers. The latter force was soon augmented by the addition of a crowd that rapidly gathered, and a general free-for-all fight was in progress a few minutes after the first scrap occurred.

During the melee, a Connellsville youth was cut about the head and face and a large stranger, who was taken away by friends, was pummeled severely about the head and chest. Others received minor bruises.

Chief of Police Samuel Rittenour, with the judicious use of his mace, finally forced the rioters to disband. He made 12 arrests during the day. Two of the prisoners were the alleged spotters. At the borough building they gave their names as Rockwell of Fairchance and Satterfield of Uniontown. They denied that they were in the employ of the railroad company. Both were arrested on charges of disorderly conduct and secured their freedom upon $500 bonds.

Last night the burgess swore in Jack Kennedy as a special officer and during the evening he assisted the chief in maintaining order.

The one bar within the borough did a rushing business all day yesterday. Those in Connellsville were closed on account of the election.

NEUROUS PROSTRATION

Severe Case of a Philadelphia Woman—Her Symptoms.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I had a severe case of nervous prostration, with palpitation of the heart, insomnia, constipation, headache, dizziness, noise in my ears, timid, nervous, restless feelings and sleeplessness."

"I read in the paper where a young woman had been cured of the same troubles by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound so I threw away the medicine the doctor left me and began taking the Compound. Before I had taken half a bottle I was able to sit up and in a short time I was able to do all my work. Your medicine has proved itself able to do all you say it will and I have recommended it in every household I have visited."—Mrs. MARY JOHNSON, 210 Siegel Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Another Bad Case.
Ephrata, Pa.—"About a year ago I was down with nervous prostration. I was pale and weak and would have hysterical spells, sick headaches and a bad pain under my shoulder-blade. "Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has made me well and happy and I have begun to gain in weight and my face looks healthy now."—Mrs. L. W. HONNBERGER, R. No. 8, Ephrata, Pa.

RHEUMA—Greatest Remedy for Rheumatism, Gout and Sciatica. Only 50 Cents and Money Back from A. A. Clarke.

If It Doesn't Satisfy.

Thousands of persons during the last year freed themselves from the bondage of Rheumatism, rid themselves of the torturing pain; reduced the swollen joints, threw away canes and crutches, and from hopeless beings became able to work and be of use to themselves and their families.

They took RHEUMA; the modern enemy of Rheumatism, which is also sure cure for Lumbago, Sciatica, Arthritis, Gout, Chronic Neuritis or Kidney disease.

PHYSICKING BUSINESS.

Answering the argument that the falling off in untitled orders of the United States Steel Corporation of nearly 500,000 tons in April is not significant, the American Metal Market says:

"The falling off in untitled orders not only represents lack of confidence in the future, but to a great extent actual change in physical business conditions, and is the result of a change in the operations and conditions of hundreds, if not thousands, of buyers. When the buyers do not send in their specifications, or hold up shipment of an order, or cancel it, it is because something has happened to affect or change his business, and therefore in our opinion, the falling off of untitled orders is greatly more important in the diagnosis of the condition of trade than the placing of orders for future deliveries.

"We know it could be said in contradiction to this, that the shipments go on just the same, and it could be cited that the corporation shipped about 1,100,000 tons during April. These shipments, however, were on specifications that were sent in one or two months ago, and represented conditions of business at that time. A great change in business conditions for the worse began over a month ago and has continued and the statistics that are now being available are demonstrating it.

"In the history of the United States Steel Corporation, there have been few cases where the monthly statement has ever shown such a recession in new orders as shown in April, and it is absurd to minimize it, or to consider it of no importance. Right along we have been told that the iron and steel trade was making a record, and that was true, as regards manufacture and shipment of old orders; and entirely different from the metal trade in general, which was not true, and the United States Steel Corporation's statement has demonstrated it. In many metals there has been a complete stoppage of any new buying for several weeks past, but it was argued that as the iron and steel trade was keeping up, and showing no recession, this lack of new buying in other metals was caused by high prices alone, and should be ignored. Now it has been shown that the iron and steel trade has been experiencing the same shrinkage in new orders as other trades. It could not be otherwise.

"Business in this country each day is more fully realizing and feeling the influences of a radical tariff revision downwards, especially when accompanied with Socialism threats to the manufacturers if they reduce wages or cut their operations. We are told these radical tariff treatments are to make us more efficient. In view of the source from which the treatment is to be received, they might as well say, 'Physician heal thyself.' We have not the slightest doubt that the manufacturers and business interests of this country will pass through the present crisis as they have passed through others in the past, but it is absurd to discuss the fact that the situation is a serious one.

"The business interests of this country are not the only ones that require treatment and physicking. We are prepared to take our share of the medicine, and we are inclined to think that the business interests of the country are in much sicker condition than our Washington doctors think, and will stand the physicking better than some other interests who, it is proposed, are to be considered immune to any of the effects of the proposed treatment, but are to receive all of the benefits of the coming legislation and none of its rigors."

THE BOND ELECTION.

The vote was pretty nearly unanimous against the proposed issue of $175,000 of bonds for the building of a new high school in Conneltsville. The result was a surprise to many, as the proposition was widely and wisely.

There are unmistakable indications that the school directors themselves realized this fact before the election, but they had gone too far they thought to retreat. They feel that it is never too late to retreat if the way is still open.

It will not do for the directors or any of them to say that they made no fight for the bond issue. They might have been more aggressive. It is true, but it is also a fact that they did practically all the fighting that was done; and, if they merely wanted an expression of the people's will, they got it in no uncertain terms.

A MUNICIPAL MACHINE BILL.

The Clark Commission Government bill for cities of the third class permits the mayor and the councilmen to succeed themselves without the possibility of their being in the position of city government for the upbuilding of municipal machines that for effective buckraming will have Tammany Hall faded and cause the smiling Tiger to look sad and mournful.

The Commission plan includes the Referendum, but the Referendum does not apply to appropriations. If there is any necessity for the Referendum, it will first be apparent in the appropriations. The most vital interest the taxpayers have in municipal government is that which reaches their pocket. Under the Clark bill they are to have nothing to say about this, but they may demand to be heard on every other question. The other questions, it is true, are relatively unimportant to a machine combine, especially since councils are afraid to grant franchises of any sort unless they have the undoubted assent of a majority of the people.

In their effort to get away from the dickens and pickering of ward politics, which frequently put worthy projects on a barter basis with unworthy ones, the legislators have gone to the other extreme, and propose to make a worse condition than now exists. Progress is to be encouraged, but experiments in government should

No Encouragement

"I WAS talking with Mrs. Peckinshaw this afternoon," remarked Mrs. Jamieson, "about a new typewriter and now, as she's going to travel for an indefinite time, she wants to sell it. She offered it to me for $25. I think it would be so nice to have a typewriter in the house."

"So do I," said Mrs. Jamieson, "and I like to have a corncripper, too, and a law press and a turbine water wheel. When she finds good use for a law press, and I have often thought that our lives would be properly rounded out until we had a steam engine, and I have often thought that our lives would be properly rounded out until we had a steam engine, and I have often thought that our lives would be properly rounded out until we had a steam engine."

"A good serviceable typewriter would be useful in a hundred ways," it would make a good toilet if it had a cushion on it, and there's nothing better for holding a door open. It might be used as a walking stick when we got that cow we have been talking about. My all-around doubtless from the building and loan, and buy this place of one of our neighbors. While we're buying it I'll take occasion to tell that notorious female my opinion that she is a disgrace to the neighborhood. I feel humiliated when I reflect upon the chance she has had to beat me."

"I am surprised that she should be so lost to all the facilities of modern life. The typewriter of hers last winter cost her $100. Her children have been pestered with her for weeks, and you couldn't write with it any more than you could grind coffee with it."

"You have no more use for a typewriter than I have for a deep sea diver. I don't want it, and I don't want to write to do, except when you send me a card, and then I'll write you back. I don't want to be a nuisance to you, and I don't want to be a nuisance to you, and I don't want to be a nuisance to you."

It is beginning to look as if a great many crimes were about to be committed in the name of the People at Washington and Harrisburg.

From the bench Judge Doty has recommended the Commissioners of Westmoreland county for their failure to heed the repeated recommendations of the grand jury of the county, concerning the erection of an asylum for the indigent insane. While we are not familiar with the financial condition of Westmoreland county, we assume that it is able to erect such a building, and as a matter of common sense and public economy it should do so.

The Conneltsville bond election was one of the driest in years.

The eastern barbers propose to charge regular customers who get shaved in their shops 35 cents for a hair cut, while those who shave themselves will have to pay 50 cents. This is rank discrimination against the safety razors.

The bond election carried in the Chamber of Commerce meeting, but not at the polls.

An Ohio mine has let go with the result that fifteen miners are dead. As in the Washington county case, there were two explosions, the second of which caught some of the rescuers. These explosions do not seem to add any confirmation to the atmospheric theory.

It develops that the Standard Oil crowd had two opportunities to buy the Carnegie Steel properties, but that they got cold feet. Perhaps John D. was afraid of Andy.

It is announced that the Senate Tariff hearings will be open to the press. The Democratic Senators seem to think this is a great concession to the manufacturers who are asking to be heard in their own defense. The Tariff hearings are evidently going to be open to everybody, but those interested personally and financially in them.

The Pennsylvania railroad is getting into the Conneltsville coke region passenger gains very late, but it promises to be at it both early and late.

The Buckhannon & Northern is on its way.

The burglarizing of freight cars in transit keeps a big force of railroad officers busy all the time and in spite of their efforts the thieves get away with a startling amount of goods. Many of the thieves are not apprehended only because a number of otherwise good citizens think it is no crime to rob a railroad.

In Greensburg the rival electric lighting proposition has an ice plant hung to it.

The results at Harrisburg indicate that the Bull Moose and Democratic forces have no prospect of Progressive legislation, and that without the influence of the Republicans there wouldn't be much real Progress.

The Pennsylvania owl train will be a limited so far as running time is concerned.

Schoolboy pranks are not expected to be wise or dignified, but the school authorities very properly insist that they shall be decent and not too destructive. The more pleasant lads who tarred the pole will probably remember this.

Back alley tipping will be discouraged by the police. The object of the court in closing the barrooms at 9 o'clock was to encourage men to go just write them, with an old cheap pen and you'll see the women coming with a their longies hanging out.

"The married man of this day and generation has no chance. He's bound to lead in the poorest house or in the worst of all he can do. His wife just spends her time thinking of things to buy. She'll buy anything from a dead cat to a circus tent if somebody tells her it's a bargain."

"The older I grow, the more I think of the economy and the value of money. Mother kept chasing me every penny that came into the house, and the penny that got away had to be an awful dodger. She was a great hand at making cakes and pies and such things, and her cakes and pies were something. Mrs. Jamieson, in order to make them she had to beat a lot of eggs. My father hogged her and begged her to let him buy a patent egg beater, which was a new invention. Mother wanted the machine and enough, but for a long time she refused to have it, because the fifty cents it would cost might be used to better advantage. So she kept on beating eggs with a spoon or fork or kindred utensil. It took about three days to beat an egg the way she did it, but she was just the same. At last she got rheumatism in her wrist, and then she consented to have a patent egg beater. I don't suppose there's a woman in the United States who doesn't have a patent egg beater. The wife and mother of the present day want a machine to do what her husband's savings for a Studebaker typewriter, which she has nothing to do with, and couldn't write it. It was the same way in our laundry department. Mother did the family washing by hand rather than spend money for a washing machine. Father urged her many times. 'He must have been a poor excuse, or he'd have bought the machine long ago and done the washing afterwards,' said Mrs. Jamieson, and her husband slammed the door as he left the room.

home to their families and their beds in a state of reasonable sobriety. Back alley tipping tends to drunkenness, disorder and demoralization. It means broken glass and sometimes broken heads. It makes fuss and muss. Its elimination is real progress.

The thief who fills his pockets with eggs and bolts the grocery is taking awful chances.

"In the future the people will write their own platform," says the Hon. Bill Bryan, professional platform author. If they do, the Hon. Bill will be out of a job.

Baseball has a language all its own. It is a cross between Hottentot and Zulu.

Whatever may be said of the character of the Republican Tariff bills nothing can be urged against the manner of their making. Every interest was given patient hearing before the bills were finally framed. The Democratic bill was drawn over night by thumb-and-rule experts and advice and information concerning the schedules are evidently not desired.

In revising the Tariff it is not information the Democrats seek, but the testing of a theory regardless of the possible conditions.

The Tariff that has to do with the High Cost of Living is not the Tariff the Democrats are working with, but the Tariff which the millmen and the retailer put upon the consumer of foodstuffs.

The silk mill promoter seems to be satisfied with the atmospheric conditions of Conneltsville. All he wants is the money. It's a modest sum he asks for. Conneltsville will raise it.

If the Democratic plans to reform the currency are no better than they were in 1891, the country will do very well without them.

School teachers must have a health certificate, too. A liberal allowance will be made for heart troubles.

Central Pennsylvania farmers kick against the railroad requirement that they load their own milk on the trains. The farmers should be relieved of that responsibility. After they load their milk at the pump it seems only fair that somebody else should load it at the platform.

Have You Something to Sell to the Public?

If so, do you tell the public about it? If you do, how do you do it? And what sort of reputation is back of the merchandise you are offering?

The answers to these questions may spell success or failure to many a merchant.

From an intimate association with a wide circle of concerns, merchandising all the necessities of life, we venture to say:

"The quickest and surest way to reach the public is through the columns of a dependable daily newspaper like THE COURIER—one that has a high standing in the community it serves, and has the confidence of its readers."

"The most dependable articles sold today are those to which the manufacturer is not afraid to attach his label—that is to say his reputation."

"Retail merchants are now joining hands with the manufacturer, and the public is thus doubly guaranteed against inferiority."

"The combination of manufacturer and retailer plus good, clean newspaper advertising means success to them both with the maximum of satisfaction to the purchaser."

MOTHER AND CHILD ARE VICTIMS OF A WILD RUNAWAY.

Mrs. Lloyd Hough and Little Son of Scottdale Injured.

FUNERAL OF MRS. J. P. BRENNEN

Was Probably Largest Ever Seen in Scottdale: Over 1,000 People Called at Her Late Home to Pay Respects to Her Memory; Other News Notes.

United Press Telegram.
SCOTSDALE, May 20.—A mother and child were seriously injured in one of the wildest runaways that ever took place in this neighborhood, when the horse being driven by Mrs. Lloyd Hough of Scottdale, yesterday afternoon, coming into town at the Anderson run culvert yesterday. Mr. and Mrs. Hough's little son, Lyle, aged about four years, was thrown out and his head cut badly requiring several stitches beneath the chin and on the scalp. Mrs. Hough bravely held to the lines, but at the bottom of the hill she was upset and the woman was thrown out, being cut and bruised. The horse ran on and was caught further up town.

The cause of the runaway is unknown. The horse had been owned by the family for a number of years, and was quiet and Mrs. Hough was always in the habit of driving it and never before had the least trouble with the animal.

FUNERAL HELD.
The funeral of Ella Kehoe Brennan, aged 50, wife of John P. Brennan, the late operator, was held from 10 to 11 o'clock yesterday afternoon, with the pastor, Rev. Father M. A. Lambing, who has been here for 24 years, and of whose congregation the deceased had been during all that time a consistent and active member. The funeral was probably the largest ever seen in this place, and the expressions of sympathy were apparently without end. Between 1,200 and 1,500 friends called at the Brennan home while the body lay there after being brought home on Friday until the time of the funeral. The floral tributes filled one large room, and came from all classes and conditions. The deceased was one of the most beloved women of town, a woman of rare generosity, not alone in material things, but in the kindness of heart, and many a family will miss her sorely. In his sermon Rev. M. A. Lambing read from Proverbs and spoke most eloquently and feelingly of the good qualities of the deceased. The funeral home was John R. Byrne, James Lynch, Harry Lauchrey, Will A. White, W. A. Todd and Edward O'Neill. Every town of this vicinity was represented by friends who came here to pay their last respects to the dead.

MISS BEACON DEAD.
Miss Sara Ella Beacon, daughter of the late L. B. and Myrtina Beacon, died at the home of her sister, Mrs. M. L. Newcomer of Chestnut street, on Tuesday. The services will be held there this evening and burial will be at Brownsville on Wednesday.

SOCIAL SERVICE.
Harry P. Ward, secretary of the local service department of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and representative of the federated church council, spoke in the Methodist Episcopal Church last evening on the conservation of human life as an asset for the church to work upon. Child labor, excessive working hours, seven days a week labor, the consumption of health, the providing of healthful amusements to counteract the commercialized amusements, the elimination of vice conditions, the paying of a living wage, were given as objects for which the church should strive in united work to attain. In order that they might have something upon to work in the spiritual sense. No man or woman overburdened and dulled by pressing conditions has a fair chance, was the speaker's argument, to render efficient service, and are therefore a waste product in the world so far as the mission of the church goes.

CLEVER PARTY.
Marked with clever ideas the birthday dinner given by Edward Stauffer at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Stauffer, of Market street, was a pleasing social event of Saturday evening, for which covers were laid for 10 persons. The table was beautiful, with a great birthday cake from which came out a May pole, and radiating from this a each plate were pink and white ribbons. Two candles were set at each place and the number of these with one on the birthday cake gave the number of years which the young host was celebrating.

Following the course dinner a stonopon was brought into play and in a large arena were thrown the portraits of each of the guests in their infantile days. There was great fun over these in guessing whose pictures were being shown, and this feature of the entertainment was the cause of great surprise as the host had secretly opened much time in securing from each of the homes represented the portraits used. After some music the party disbanded, wishing their host many happy returns of the day.

Those present were Misses Helen Neworth, Caroline Bisher, Lulu Gallentine, Ruth Gallentine and Sophia Price, and Ralph Sherrick, Frank Walker, William Prosser and Harold Jordan.

OFFICERS INSTALLED.
The newly elected officers of the Epworth League of the First Methodist Episcopal Church were installed with special services at the church on Sunday evening, the officers being seated in the choir loft, and the services under the direction of the pastor, Rev. H. S. Piper. The following were the officers installed: President, Miss Blanche Leary; first vice president, Ralph C. Walker; second vice president, Miss Alice McCombs; third vice president, Miss Hazel Van Horn; fourth vice president, Miss Kate Jordan; Secretary, Frances Young; Treasurer, Benjamin H. Willard; chorister, Edward Stauffer.

HERE! MEN OF MODERATE HAIR

Read This.

You will often see a man who fulfills your ideal of a man in almost every particular. He may have a good head, fine physique, perfect manner, an interesting personality and bear himself with the distinguished air of a gentleman. His linen is immaculate and his clothes faultless as to cut and material. But all the pleasant first impressions are ruined when you discover the collar and shoulders of his coat covered with loose hair and dandruff.

This is an indication of personal carelessness, not to say uncleanness. You feel like telling him to get a bottle of Newbro's Hairpeptide, and if you are a real friend to him you will tell him. This remarkable remedy would in a short time remove every trace of dandruff from his head, stop his hair from falling and prevent him from becoming bald. Bald-headed men always look old, whether they are or are not.

Dandruff is due to a germ which causes the scale-like accumulation. Newbro's Hairpeptide, used intelligently, checks this accumulation, prevents the hair from falling out and stops that frightful itching of the scalp almost instantly. It has a most delightful odor.

Hairpeptide is the Original Remedy, that destroys dandruff. There is nothing in the world just like it, nothing that is "just as good."

The effect of "button" strikes and local disturbances in the anthracite fields of Pennsylvania are reflected in the small shipments for April, which amounted to only 5,489,189 tons. Shipments for April 1912 did not afford a fair comparison as that was the time of the "suspension," and only 266,625 tons of coal were shipped. In April 1910 the shipments were 5,834,915 tons, and in 1910 they were 5,224,395 tons.

The amount of coal on hand at tide-water shipping ports decreased 225,872 tons from 775,115 tons on March 31 to 549,243 tons at the close of April.

STIMULATES COMPETITION

Schwab, Steel Trust Rival, Defends Combination

NEW YORK, May 20.—Charles M. Schwab, president of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, and first president of the United States Steel Corporation, took the stand today as a witness for the defense in the government suit to dissolve the latter corporation.

Mr. Schwab described the famous dinner given him in 1909 by prominent financiers, at which Schwab made a plea for consolidation in the steel industry on the ground of economy.

Mr. Schwab, who is now chairman of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, one of the United States Steel's largest competitors, declared that "no other factor or influence has done more to foster trade, to stimulate fair and open dealing and to stimulate healthy and effective competition than the United States Steel Corporation."

Mr. Schwab was asked if the Carnegie Steel Company and the Illinois Steel Company were competitors before they were absorbed by the corporation. If it can prove this question in the affirmative the government hopes to show that the corporation was organized to suppress competition. The witness conceded that the companies did compete "to a certain extent."

DAILY AWAITS DEATH

But Physicians Hold Hope for Banker

MACON, Ga., May 20.—Doctors today held out hope to Sanders Walker, the young banker who has been awaiting death with spirited gaiety since last Thursday, when he swallowed a blister of mercury tablet by mistake. Treatment recommended in a telegram by a nurse who was saved from similar poison is being administered.

As soon as Walker was assured that his days were numbered, he started on a round of social pleasures to make his last days as bright as possible and wound up last night with a reception. Physicians say that Walker's case is one of the most unusual in medical annals. Bichloride poisoning usually results in death within two days.

COAL CRUSHERS ARE IMPORTANT PART OF THE COKE INDUSTRY

Only in the Connellsville Region Can Their Use be Discarded.

FINE PARTICLES ARE NECESSARY

Eight-inch Screen, or Smaller, is Now Sought by Coke Manufacturers of Other Regions; Crushers in General Use at By-Product Operations.

Only Connellsville coking coal will make good coke without being crushed before it is charged in the ovens. In other regions the coal must be crushed as fine as possible, the present standard being a one-eighth inch screen, or finer, in connection with this, Milton J. Williams of Chicago, contributes the following article to Coal Age:

There has been a notable change in the size of coal employed in coke manufacture during the past decade and a half. Twelve or 15 years ago the by-product oven was little known in this country, and those making coke in beehive ovens at that time seldom used crushers, taking their slack or screenings and charging the ovens with coarse coal. It was not long, however, before someone discovered that great losses were incurred in coking coal in this manner, and tried a crusher. This was the beginning of what is now an important step in almost every large coking operation.

The first crushers used produced a product ranging from one-half down to dust. The results obtained were encouraging, but the crude crushers used were light of construction, and much trouble was in accessible for renewal or repair parts, could not be adapted for fine or coarse work in the same machine, and were generally speaking, unsatisfactory. Enterprising operators therefore began to search for a more substantial pulverizing machine, and one that would produce a finer and more uniform product. Their theory was that if one-half lump and finer, two better results than run-of-mine, a product 3/4-inch or 1-inch and finer would give still better results.

About this time (1895) the Shavoy Coal & Coke Company of Piquette, W. Va., secured from Milton J. Williams, of St. Louis, the first hammer crusher which has been in operation 15 months from the introduction of this machine there were in operation in West Virginia about 35 Williams hammer crushers, most of these machines being equipped to crush 3/4-inch and finer.

It was not long, however, until all of these crushers were equipped with new cages for 5/8-inch to 1/2-inch crushing, and all new machines were built with 5/8-inch perforations. It is now seldom that coal for coking is crushed coarser than 5/8-inch.

These operators found that by reducing the size of their coal they were able to produce more coke per oven, and improve its texture, making it hard and firm, something that could not be accomplished without thorough pulverization. Today in many localities in Virginia, West Virginia, Pennsylvania and other coking regions, even with the beehive ovens, the requirements are for a product through 5/8-inch opening or finer.

The coal required for by-product ovens has always been quite fine. When the Hamilton-Otto Coke Company installed their ovens about 10 years ago, they undertook to charge them with screenings and slack, but soon found that making coke in this manner was a decided failure, as the product when exposed to the elements for but a short time disintegrated and crumbled to such an extent that it had the appearance of crushed coke.

Crushing to 5/8-inch and finer gave better results and it was not long until the by-product operators all over this country were reducing for from 70 to 90 per cent through 5/8-inch openings, and this basis of fineness has prevailed for the past four or five years. Coking coal in this manner would be well-nigh impossible were it not for the improved types of crushers. As for beehive ovens, many seams of coal are now coked, using slack and screenings. These are, however, practically all in the Connellsville region, where nature has been generous in that the product of the coal measures will produce a good coke without crushing.

Almost all other coking must, however, be crushed, in order to secure a good coke. Hence mechanical means must be employed to effect nature's neglect in those seams outside the immediate vicinity of Connellsville. In coal crushing today, there seems to be a constantly increasing demand for greater capacities and heavier weights. In summing up the vast change that has taken place in the size of the product with which ovens are charged, it is evident that the crushing and sizing plant is one of the most important departments of any large coking operation. It is probable that many operators pay too little attention to the selection of the proper crushers as the increase in the percentage of coarse coal greatly affects the structure of the coke, and yields many a charge that might have been a perfect product. These conditions have been carefully studied with the result that crushers now manufactured and sold are, in most cases, machines weighing 10 to 20 tons, as compared with those of two to five tons made 10 and 15 years ago. Furthermore, the machines of today are equipped with adjustable hammers, cages and breaker plates to maintain the fineness and capacity.

APRIL IRON OUTPUT

Month Runs Only Slightly Behind February, Which Holds Record.

Despite the enforced stoppage of iron and steel works through the high waters early last month, the average daily production of coke and anthracite pig iron in April was only slightly less than in February, the record-holding month, says the Cleveland Iron Trade Review.

The actual output of coke and anthracite pig iron in April was 2,734,253 tons, compared with 2,752,823 tons in March, a loss of only 18,570 tons despite the shorter month. The production was 125,900 tons higher than in November, the last month of equal length, but less than in any succeeding month with the exception of February.

The average daily output last month was 91,512 tons, as against 88,123 tons in March, a gain last month of 3,389 tons. The record was 93 tons less than in February.

The loss in production was largely due to decreased activity among the merchant furnaces, while the gain in daily average resulted from the increased output of the steel works for non-merchant furnaces. Merchant iron production in March was 521,333 tons, and in April 522,770 tons, a loss of 1,443 tons. The steel works or non-merchant furnaces produced 1,917,750 tons in March compared with 1,955,575 tons in April, a gain last month of 37,825 tons. The average daily production of merchant iron in April was 25,126 tons, as against 26,495 tons in March, a loss of 1,369 tons. Steel works averaged a daily output of 55,519 tons in April, compared with 51,553 tons in March, a gain of 3,966 tons.

The number of active stacks on the last day of April was 237, compared with 278 on March 31, a gain of 19. Eleven merchant stacks were blown in and 4 put out of blast, a net gain of 7. Non-merchant stacks were blown in and three blown out, a net gain of 12. In all, 26 furnaces were blown in and seven blown out. Of the stacks not affected by the floods, seven were blown in and an equal number blown out. Of those blown in, three were merchant and four non-merchant stacks. Four merchant and three non-merchant furnaces were blown out.

The output of spiegel in April was 3,256 tons, compared with 6,454 tons in March, a gain of 3,198 tons. Production of ferro was 16,752 tons in April, as against 17,286 tons in March, a loss of 534 tons.

The monthly production of 1912 and 1913 to date is shown in the following table:

TARIFF INTERESTS THOMAS

Free Coal Attractive to Welsh Operator, Now in America.

Prospects that the tariff on coal will be removed will, it is said, cause D. A. Thomas, head of the British coal trust, to carefully investigate the coal lands of British Columbia during his visit across the continent. The removal of the tariff will open the Pacific Coast markets to this coal, and make British Columbia far more attractive, as a probable exporter to this country, than Nova Scotia. Mr. Thomas is also interested in the possibility of using British Columbia coal for a certain portion of the foreign trade.

Mr. Thomas has stated that he has already made his Panama plans, regardless of new ventures depending upon his American trip. He is firmly convinced of the excellence his Welsh coal has for steamship purposes and will examine American coal with a critical eye.

FREE COAL MAY BE OPENING WEDGE IN CANADIAN MARKET

Not Likely to Hurt Operators as Imports Show a Decline.

GIVES CHANCE FOR DIPLOMACY

Present Duty Believed to be Barrier Against Removal of Canadian Import Which Hurts Producers Here; Ontario Bill User But Has No Coal.

An echo comes from Indiana that opinion prevails among some of the coal producers of that state that the abolition of the tariff duty on bituminous coal will operate to reduce prices for such coal in the western markets, and that this will be reflected in the western markets. To those who are certain such an opinion we would say:—If they will pardon the Mississippi—"Forget It," says the Coal and Coke Operator. There is no danger of free coal having any influence on coal prices anywhere within the United States except, perhaps, on the Pacific Coast; and in that case the consumer would be the beneficiary, and not at all the purveyor.

When the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill was before the Congress an effort was made to have bituminous coal—except for the tariff on anthracite—added to the free list, and for the reason that we export about 10 or 12 times as much coal as we import. Moreover, of the amount we exported last year 12,148,797 tons, 3,883,789 tons were anthracite. Of the total amount exported about 66 per cent of it was produced and shipped from Western Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Ohio and almost entirely by way of the lake route. At that time producers of West Virginia thought that free coal would rob them of the New England market, and they, in association with the producers of Colorado, Wyoming and other of the Rocky Mountain States, secured a retention of duty.

The fact is that this duty has been a barrier to an enlargement of our export of coal in all those sections of the country that could advantageously engage in the export of coal. Canada is our best customer, and the Dominion duty on coal in lump form is 53 cents per net ton. Canada has no coal in the Province of Ontario, where the population is now doing coal manufacturing and power using are most pronounced. Ontario was more coal, perhaps, than all other provinces combined, and the power-users in that province have during the last three years been having the coal they buy ground to coal-dust or fine slack at the mines where it is produced merely because the tariff duty on it is only 15 cents in that form, and they thus save the difference between that and the lump-coal duty, 53 cents, or 38 cents the ton.

Now as to the quantity of coal we import. In the first place, there has not been more than about 3,000 tons of anthracite coal imported in any year since 1902, and that was due to the long-continued miners' strike of that year in our own anthracite regions. Of bituminous coal our imports last year were 1,682,350 net tons; in 1911, 1,233,598 net tons, and in 1910, 1,391,243 net tons. So that it is to be seen that our imports are decreasing as a regular thing, in fact have decreased materially in recent years.

It is now proposed to put coal on the free list. This will not enable our producers to sell a single ounce of coal outside our own borders, but it puts our diplomats, trade and political, in a position to make overtures for the abolition of coal by the Ministry of the Dominion where tariff matters are chargeable by "Orders in Council," and do not have to await the slow and tedious process of parliamentary action. Canada needs more coal, and would use more were it procurable at a lessened cost. We need the business, and could sell the coal if it were deliverable at a lower price of disposition. Why should not our coal producers within the zones where exportable coal can be produced get together and unite in effort to achieve this desirable end? It is worth the effort, it would furnish more work for our miners and our railroad men, and better earning opportunity for our capital invested in mines and in railroads and boats. Who will take up the issue?

Nova Scotia Mining.
During 1912 the Nova Scotia Steel & Coal Company mined 841,000 tons of coal, of which 265,000 tons were used by the company itself. A new seam of high quality has been discovered and 1,500 more men will be employed on it.

The ISOLATED CONTINENT

A ROMANCE OF THE FUTURE

By GUIDO VON HORVATH and DEAN HOARD

Copyright, 1913, by W. G. Chapman in the United States and Great Britain

CHAPTER I.

Astrat's Inheritance.

A gloomy foreboding of approaching disaster hung over the capital.

Hannibal Prudent, ex-President of the United Republics, was dangerously ill. The people waited quietly and talked in subdued tones, as though they feared to disturb him.

Hannibal Prudent, the scientist whose invention had saved the country, was eighty-four years old, but he had carried the weight of his years lightly and had worked unceasingly. On a flying trip to Labrador he had contracted a severe cold which developed into pneumonia. Just as the disease was nearing the crisis a curious thing happened, something that had not happened in the half-century which had passed since he had put an isolator between America and the other continents.

A wireless message had come from Europe.

The great man had been awakened by the ringing of the 4,500-mile bell on the small electro-stylograph that stood by his bedside. To his astonishment the indicator that automatically registered the sending station pointed to Berlin, Germany. He stared in amazement at the instrument and saw sparks following sparks on its small, square, milk-glass plate.

He put forth a shaking hand and adjusted the receiving horn. The electric sparks then formed a picture—a moving picture that talked! A man in military uniform looked at him from the picture and a clear voice with a German accent said in English: "Professor Prudent?"

"Yes, sir, Hannibal Prudent."

The figure bowed reverently. "I am Count von Werdenstein. As you see, I have bored through your isolating rays with my sparks of electricity. This is the beginning. The next time I talk to you there will be nothing to keep the fleet of consolidated Europe from entering the ports of the Americas. I am giving you this warning because I admire you—you were my honored father's teacher."

The figure on the plate bowed again, then vanished.

Hannibal Prudent gazed curiously at the glass of the apparatus, trying to believe that he had experienced a vision; but when he saw the words of "Werdenstein" clearly printed by the magnificent instrument on a sheet of paper by the stylus he faintly. The vitality that could combat physical suffering could not bear the menacing news that the little instrument had brought.

When he opened his eyes his daughter Astrat stood at the bedside and the house physician was counting his pulse. The scientist still held Werdenstein's message crumpled up in his old fingers—the message that conveyed such crushing news. Impatiently, as one who knows his time is short, he asked to be left alone with his daughter. As the door closed behind the doctor he cried out in agony: "All my hopes and all my life work are threatened. I had hoped that here where I had established peace would abide—peace that has spread comfort, contentment and happiness over our continent; peace that created and conserved fortunes greater than any ever before known to man; peace that permitted developments so high that even the boldest would not have dared to dream them fifty years ago."

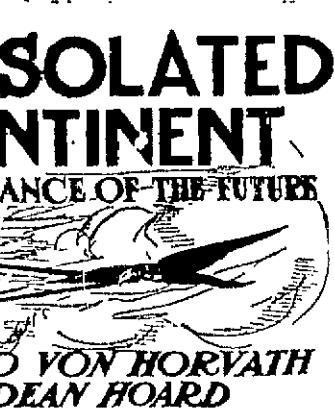

"All this will go," his voice faltered for a moment. "Read this." As the startled girl read Werdenstein's messages he cried bitterly: "They want vengeance. He felt his own pulse, watching the large chronometer on the wall opposite his bed. "My will is in the safe in my library. Here is the key. The Europeans think that the Z-ray alone binds them from entering our beloved country, but they are mistaken." He gasped for air. "I will defy them again. Astrat, write what I have to say."

His breath came gaspingly; his eyes grew dull; a whirlwind seemed to possess the great brain that had been able to create peace for America for half a century.

Astrat watched him with apprehension; she did not speak, as she realized that it would be a waste of time, and the short time left her adopted father was precious indeed. The old man rested a moment, then seeing Astrat was ready, he said:

"When the isolation has been broken through or destroyed (both are possible, if one knows how), then new isolations must be created, one ray after another. We can gain a year that way, and that year must be used to prepare for war. War! That horror will destroy the work of a peaceful country. But we are forced to it; we will win, and peace will come forever. Plans are ready for a new craft that will be invincible. Navigation of the air will solve the problem." His voice had grown so weak that Astrat could hardly understand him, but she had taken every word down in shorthand.

"Don't grieve when I am dead. I died in peace. All my life I have been a true apostle of that gospel—hurry! Hurry to the island of—" His draw himself up with his last strength; an inarticulate sound came from his lips; he beckoned to Astrat for the pencil and paper and forced his shaking hand to write one word: "Cyrilith." ran the zigzag lines of the shaking old hand, then the pencil fell from his fingers. Calm stole over the face of the man who had lived for one great idea, "Peace." He had found it, but his last words advised "War."

Astrat looked sorrowfully at her father. Tears filled her eyes as she called the doctor.

But Hannibal Prudent had reached her, and after the first burst of grief she remembered her duty. Taking the message from Europe and her notes, she hurried to her father's library.

With a steady hand she transcribed her notes on the typewriter, but when she came to the word written by Hannibal Prudent, "Cyrilith," the tears came again.

She could not understand the meaning of the command: "Hurry to the island of Cyrilith." Was there an island of that name? She had never heard of it.

While Astrat was in her father's library the end news spread through the city. The stylograph extras began to appear at the automatic news stand. The short paragraph telling about the wireless message from Germany alarmed everybody.

More than fifty years before, in the year 1913, the now prosperous and peaceful United States had experienced a great disaster. New emigration laws and the new tariff had precipitated an international conflict that had involved not only the leading European monarchies but Japan and China as well. The ultimatum came from the West and the West. Europe was mobilizing on one side; the orientals on the other; all the nations against one. The question was whether it was best to bow before the will of the united enemy, or to lose independence. Congress seemed unable to decide.

The time given the United States for consideration was rapidly passing.

The President was in despair. He gave orders to the fleet and land forces, but in his heart he cried, "What is the use?"

This night before the day of final answer he stood before the window, looking hopelessly into the starless darkness.

Suddenly a man's head appeared at the window. The next moment the intruder jumped into the room.

Before the surprised executive could cry out the intruder exclaimed:

"For three days I have tried to gain an audience with you, but in vain."

The Great Man Had Been Awakened By the Ringing of the 4,500-mile Bell.

"Since I know that tomorrow will be too late I have forced my way to you."

"What brings you here?" the President asked.

"My desire to save my country, to repulse the enemy. I can defend the entire continent against any invasion. Don't think me mad—I am not; I have invented the greatest power. To be exact, I have discovered it. A man who solves one of nature's problems is not an inventor but a discoverer. My discovery is an invisible power that resists all attacks. Don't doubt me before I have finished. I will create around me a circle that will defend me and will ask you to try to touch me."

He took a small instrument from his pocket, and stepping back from the President, the continued:

"When I motion toward you try to touch me."

He manipulated springs on the instrument, then signaled to the President. The executive stretched his arm toward him. An invisible force bent first his hand, then his arm back. He could not touch the man from any side.

After several experiments the astounded President was convinced of the importance of the discovery.

The intruder removed the force from about him and told of his plans to save the country. They talked until long after the first rays of the morning sun shone through the windows.

When the midnight visitor had finished his confidences the President's face was brighter than it had been for many days. The careworn expression was gone. He escorted his visitor to the gate, putting his hand familiarly on his shoulder as he bade him good morning.

The midnight visitor was Hannibal Prudent, the greatest scientist of the new world.

The President spent the morning preparing dispatches for the representatives of the European and oriental nations. He gave them twenty-four hours to order their vessels from American waters, advising them that if they had not obeyed the order in that time the United States would not be responsible for their future.

The new laws that had been formulated by the United States government and which were so objectionable to the powers would stand, and the United States would see that they were enforced.

Three days later Hannibal Prudent created a current of the impenetrable Z-ray that isolated the whole American continent from the rest of the world.

Fifty years had passed; fifty years of independent peace. The Central and South American republics had joined the great United States and a confederacy was formed that secured their independence and the freedom of commerce.

Those fifty years of peace had created wealth, happiness and a scientific progress such as had never been equaled.

Now the man whose genius had made this possible lay dead, and his last words urged preparation for war.

Astrat sat before her father's desk; before her lay a document that demanded careful study—the will of her adopted father.

She did not look at the long list of bonds and stocks; she did not care for the vast wealth that from now on would belong to her alone. The paper she was reading contained far-reaching instructions, prophetic insight into the future. The last page was a farewell letter:

"My dear Astrat, knowing that I am nearing the limit of human existence, and that rest awaits me after a long and full life, I set down such facts as will enable you to make the best use of the knowledge that I, the old tree, wish perpetuated in the blossoming plant; it is you who will be responsible for the coming prosperity of the country. God gave you a broad mind that has developed to its fullest capacity under my care and I am proud of you, dear girl; you are chosen to do great things for your country and humanity."

"There is only one man on earth who is worthy of calling you wife; you will find this man, or he will come to you, as you two are ordained mates, comrades."

"When I go to my rest I feel that I will leave turbulent times behind me. My Z-ray will not remain impalpable forever, and when the day comes that it is destroyed, the country will need a brave, competent man to drive away the dreadnaughts. He will come, as he has been fully instructed. Trust in him, my dear daughter."

"This country was not developed to be blasted by war; the adventures of warfare and strife are not for it. Our Creator selected this country to promote freedom, equality and science. Thundering cannons shall never more sound on our shore; our land shall be a land of love and peace."

upright figure, clear eyes and bronzed face, hastened to the holliboard; he was followed by a short man, whose rotundity more than made up for his lack of height. The tall man with the bronzed face eagerly watched the sparkling news; as he had been cut off from any form of communication on the Tube Lines for fourteen hours. The sparks at that moment were printing some uninteresting commercial news, but soon the following notice appeared:

"The coronation of the ex-President, Hannibal Prudent, will be held at 4:00 p. m. Thursday."

"Too late!" whispered the stranger, sadly, removing his hat. "Friend Santos, we are too late. How happy, how contented he would have been had he received the news I wanted to give him personally before he left." He took the arm of his friend. "Come, Santos, we have some hard work in store."

They took the elevator to the reception station of the depot, where they boarded the south-bound zero bus. A few minutes later they landed at the terrace of the American Hotel.

The same morning Astrat received several committees offering their sympathies and condolences. When the last one had gone she sank exhausted on a couch. She had rested but a moment when a servant brought in a card. She sighed wearily and made a motion of dissatisfaction when she read the name "Ambrosio Hale."

The man was admitted. As he entered he bowed deeply before the weary girl who stood there in her black gown, looking like an angel of sorrow. The exquisite face had taken on a new beauty through her affliction, which the newcomer quickly noticed.

"I have come, my poor, suffering girl, as a friend of your father. During these days of sorrow your woman's heart needs the aid of a strong man. Your father honored me with his intimate friendship, and I want to offer you my services."

"Thank you very much, Mr. Hale. Your kindness touches me. It is good to know that there are friends upon whom I can count during these sad days. My beloved father, however, made such far-reaching arrangements that I hardly think there is any need of your assistance. But I thank you with all my heart."

With these words she offered her hand to Hale, who retained it in his grasp greedily.

"I also want to tell you something confidential, my dear Astrat: The Continental Club feels that this coming election will bring the long expected event—that is, the nomination of the first woman President. And the eye of the Continental Club rests on you!"

Astrat smiled serenely.

"Should the country select me for its executive, I shall be glad to serve, and I will do my best to carry out the plans formed by my father for the furtherance of the United Republics."

She looked at the man whose forest-like eyes could not leave her face, whose thick lips were parted, showing a row of gleaming teeth. In spite of his handsome appearance Astrat had long ago discovered some hostile trait in him, and had often wondered how her father could extend his friendship to such a man. These thoughts fitted through the brain of the girl, then an afterthought came and she asked:

"Mr. Hale, can you give me any information in regard to a place I cannot find?"

"I will do my best, my dear Astrat," said Hale, as Astrat hesitated.

"Do you know a town, a district, village or any other place by the name of 'Cyrilith'?"

Mr. Hale thought for a moment, then admitted that he had never heard of the place.

Astrat felt some satisfaction.

As Hale left the crystal palace, he met the tall, bronzed man who had arrived on the fourteen-hour limited from San Francisco that morning, on the broad stairway that led up to the main entrance. He eyed the sunburnt athlete man curiously; the man, notwithstanding his modest style of dress, looked a stranger.

In the hall, he handed his card to the waiting servant without a word. The servant looked at it and saw but one name:

"Napoleon Edison."

As the stranger had no appointment, Astrat told the servant to advise him that she could not receive anyone until Thursday evening, after the coronation of her father's earthly remains.

Edison shook his head somewhat impatiently.

"If you say it is her wish not to see me until Thursday evening, I must wait notwithstanding the importance of my mission."

He turned, left as hurriedly as he came. His whole being seemed surcharged with energy.

Napoleon Edison met his short friend Santos on the roof garden before the hourly stylograph. The round, ruddy cheeked man was watching the holliboard with interest. He enjoyed the great city immensely, and at that moment he was laughing heartily at the comic section shown on the board.

The newspaper was reproducing some funny pictures made by a Chicago artist in the early days of the twentieth century. "I have never seen such amusing brain products in my life," he said.

Edison smiled at the amusement of the man he called Santos. Taking his arm, he led him to the elevator. This time they went to the subway tube and, after making some inquiries of the guard, Edison bought two tickets for New York. It took two hours for them to make the journey between Washington and New York.

After they left the train, the two showed their way through excited and mourning crowds. Santos could hardly keep pace with the long strides of Edison. They turned into Forty-second street from the avenue and hurried into the Hippodrome, an immense, but very old structure, a relic of the nineteenth century.

The continental party had gathered in this building and a somewhat stout woman was speaking when the two strangers entered. The audience listened to the woman with intense attention; her pleasant, strong contralto voice filled the great hall and she brought out important points in her address with decisive strokes.

Edison and Santos stopped and listened.

"To whom do we owe all these blessings? To whom must we give thanks for the thousands of other things that add comfort to home life, travel and national existence? To whom but the

"I know that many of the sectionalists and internationalists say we are isolated from the countries that gave us our ancestors; I know that the sectionalists think the isolation was an outrage against our further development in art, literature and science. They think those things, but we continentalists know differently."

"It is true no Italian singers can be imported to please the ears of the wealthy; it is true that we cannot add ancient pictures to our collections of masterpieces; it is true that the yachts of our rich cannot make a tour of the Mediterranean; but compare our losses with our gains!"

"Since the isolation we have created our American art! Does not that alone pay for our isolation?"

"Our singers sing the airs of our country; our artists paint pure, beloved objects and scenes known to all of us."

"Look at our magnificent, lofty architecture, our terraces and roof gardens at our reversible street covers, at the swinging gardens, tube and aerial roads. These are our own; these are not influenced by foreign education. We created them ourselves."

She stopped for a moment, stretched out her shapely arm and continued:

"Before the isolation of our continent, we were a mixture of all the nations of the world, today we are a nation complete in ourselves. There are no English, Irish, Dutch, German, Italian or Spaniards left. These nationalities have merged and produced the citizen of America."

Her voice sank lower and vibrated with emotion.

"A new item has sparked through the country, a bit of news even more heart-breaking than the news of the departure of the greatest man our country has produced. I mean the news that our stronghold is near its breakdown, that European scientists have discovered the way to invade our isolation. I pray that the news is untrue, but should it be true, then we will have to prepare for defense."

"Compatriots, true citizens! Who can fill the executive chair more satisfactorily than the one who, throughout her whole life, has been prepared for it? I call to you and ask you to give your best judgment for the cause and with one heart and one thought nominate for the continentalist candidate the daughter of Prudent, Astrat Prudent."

Here she was interrupted by a heavy voice thundering:

"No female rule for me!"

That was all he could say, as his voice flattened out behind a healthy slap delivered resoundingly on the disturber's mouth. The hand and arm that administered this rebuke belonged to Napoleon Edison. With a strong jerk he turned the surprised man toward the door and he was carried on and on as if he were a wreck being tossed by stormy waves. When order was restored, the speaker continued:

"With all my heart I trust Miss Prudent will be the nominee of the continentalists. Those who agree with me, kindly stand up!"

As one body the audience rose and 50,000 voices thundered "Hurrah! for the continental nominee!"
